

Abenmire Adi

Abenmire Adi is a Nigerian broadcast journalist living and working in Calabar, Cross River State.

With a career spanning over seven years on radio and television she has over the years developed special interest in community and human angle stories and bringing to fore, conversations on gender equality, human rights and the sustainable development goals. Abenmire is the secretary of the Water, Sanitation and Hygiene, WASH media network in Cross River State.

She mentors young persons (mostly girls) and has spent the past year drawing attention to curbing the menace of gender-based violence through a radio show she created.

Chukwuma Muanya

Chukwuma Muanya is an Assistant Editor of The Guardian Newspapers (Head Insight Team, Science & Technology) as well as the Science & Health Editor. Muanya has 21 years post NYSC experience in reporting science and health. Muanya is one of the pioneer students of the Advanced Writing and Reporting Skills (AWARES) programme of the Centre for Media Communications of the Pan Atlantic University (former Pan African University). Muanya has a BSc in Botany (2nd Class Upper Division) and MSc in Pharmacognosy from the University of Lagos. Muanya has won several awards including the Newspaper Reporter of The Year (two times) and Print Reporter of the Year (twice) from the Nigeria Media Merit Awards (NMMA) and Child Friendly Reporter from the Diamond Awards for Media Excellence (DAME). Muanya has attended five sessions of the World Health Assembly (WHA) at the World Health Organisation (WHO) in Geneva, Switzerland as part of the Nigeria delegation.

Francis Ajufo

Ajufo Francis who prefers to be addressed as Frank Ajufo, holds a Master's Degree in Development Studies from the prestigious Nigerian Defence Academy post-graduate school. He has over six years of experience in journalism and has keen interest in development journalism, majoring in health, and justice in Human Capacity Development (HCD).

Frank Ajufo has consulted for the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) Nigeria Office, Women Advocates for Vaccine Access (WAVA), Community Health Research Initiative (CHR) and the Vaccine Network.

He also has several journalism awards to his name, including Open Forum for Africa Biotechnology (OFAB).

Agbonkhese Oboh

Agbonkhese K. Oboh joined Vanguard newspaper in 2006 as a proof reader. He became a sub-editor, senior sub-editor, deputy chief sub-editor, then deputy online editor in February 2020.

He holds a HND in Mass Communication, Auchi Polytechnic, Auchi (2004); B.A.(Hons) and M.A. in Literature-in-English, LASU (2013), and UNILAG (2017), respectively. He has taken certificate courses/trainings, such as Solution and Data Journalism Academy, SMC, Pan-Atlantic University, Lekki, Lagos (February 2020).

Oboh has always functioned in production (editing, re-writing, headlines, formatting and pages/layout). However, writing engaging pieces on issues such as sexual/reproductive health, tobacco control and climate change have been satisfying.

TEMITAYO AYETOTO

Temitayo Ayetoto is a writer at BusinessDay Newspaper who is passionate about investigative and feature reports largely touching on underreported plights of Nigerians. In the last one year, she has worked on four in-depth investigative pieces, three of which exposed the fatal toll that deep-seated rot in the healthcare system takes on helpless people. One of her works earned her a top spot among the five finalist for PwC Journalist of the Year 2020.

Ayetoto, who has also been entrusted with reporting assignments in Egypt and Dubai continues to report on issues demanding social change with renewed resolve.

Andrew Ibrahim Mshelia

Andrew Ibrahim Mshelia works with Nagarta Radio Kaduna and has expertise reporting current affair's as well as working in the department as a producer. He is a Mass Communication graduate of the Federal Polytechnic, Mubi, Adamawa State Nigeria and has been in practice since 2013.

Amos Abba

Amos Abba, works as an investigative journalist with the International Center for Investigative Reporting, ICIR, an online media platform based in Abuja with specific emphasis on holding the powerful to account.

Amos was nominated for the Nigeria Academy of Science Awards for Best Science Report in 2018. He was shortlisted for the Thomson Reuters Foundation Young Journalist Award and a finalist in the Kurt Schork Memorial Awards in International Journalism in 2019.

He currently reports on the oil and gas sector with a special focus on how the activities of the oil industry in Nigeria impacts the environment.